

which a baseball scout, played with great relish by Dakin Matthews, explains why Amos will never be good enough to play professional ball, is economical, heartbreaking and violent within a few pages; playwriting in which anyone could sense that this is an author to be reckoned with. Director Dan Fields has chosen his cast well; in addition to Matthews, standouts are Mark Doerr as Amos and Kellie Waymire as Hester.

Ivy Substation, 9070 Venice Blvd., to Sun. May 21.

site design: